HISTORY

From the early 1960s Jack Brooks and a few volunteers could see the need to enhance salmon runs in the Sooke River and local creeks. With Jack's persistence, the enhancement grew from clearing log jams, salvaging and relocation of fry, to clearing a small site on private property where a few homemade gravel incubation boxes and old bathtubs were used to hatch and catch new fry. In 1981, the Hatchery was officially founded on Rocky Creek, near Demamiel Creek and Young Lake. The land that the hatchery is on is leased at a nominal sum from Timber West.

Expanding from a few more incubation boxes to stacks of Heath trays, increasing the number of Capilano troughs, and adding large rearing tanks was made possible by the hard work of many volunteers. The Hatchery of today has grown to be the main influence on the ever-increasing returns of Chinook and Coho to the Sooke River and its tributaries. Because the Jack Brooks Hatchery releases up to 700,000 Chinook and up to 200,000 Coho yearly, the proceeds from this Derby will help the volunteers' endeavours to ensure salmon will return to our area for all of us to enjoy.

The Sooke Salmon Enhancement Society's members thank you for your continued support. We hatch 'em so you can catch 'em. Good luck!

JACK BROOKS HATCHERY

Counting this year's production, it will put the Hatchery at approximately 20,000,000 fry that we have put back into the systems since we started our hatchery site in 1981. Prior to that, a group of volunteers under the stewardship of Jack Brooks were clearing streams, feeding fry, taking brood stock as far back as the late 1950s.

The Sooke Salmon Enhancement Society gratefully acknowledges the following for their assistance with the Derby:

- Sooke Lions Club
- Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure
- Sooke Community Association
